HIV / AIDS Symposium

London: 1st December 2007

Join us at this one-day Symposium in London for a fascinating insight into the role of homeopathy in treating HIV/AIDS.

Our three expert speakers from a variety of backgrounds will present their experiences in the field followed by ample opportunity for participants' questions and discussion during our 'panel' session at the end of the day.

Jonathan Stallick, well known for his pioneering work with patients with HIV/AIDS and his book AIDS: The Homeopathic Challenge, will set the context for the day. Hilary Fairclough will tell us about the Maun Homeopathy Project in Botswana which she jointly founded in 2002. This innovative project offers free homeopathy outreach clinics in an area where over 35% of the people are infected with HIV or AIDS, one of the highest rates in the world. Harry van der Zee will introduce us to a completely different and controversial treatment for AIDS in Africa using a new set of healing remedies created by Peter Chappell.

We anticipate that this thought-provoking day will generate much lively debate and discussion and invite all participants to contribute their questions to the panel for the final session.

Jonathan Stallick

Jonathan Stallick was one of the pioneers of homeopathic treatment of HIV/AIDS at a time when there was widespread fear and ignorance of the disease both in society at large and within homeopathic circles. He worked for some 5 years at two of London's major centres for sufferers of the disease and despite the ever present challenges and threat of 'burn-out' he helped many people. However, his prescribing at that time was unconventional and drew criticism and praise in equal measure from homeopathic colleagues. Later, his book, 'AIDS: The Homeopathic Challenge' led to demand for his lecturing around the world. At this symposium Jonathan will talk about his fascinating experiences, set the context for the day and hopefully provide inspiration for those still on the road of discovery.

Harry van der Zee:*PC1 - Resonance for HIV/AIDS

In searching for an effective remedy for treating the AIDS-epidemic in Africa, the UK-homeopath Peter Chappell discovered a method to design remedies fitting the totality of a disease. These remedies are now known as PC-remedies. His remedy for HIV/AIDS has been used in Africa since 2002. In 2004 and 2006 Harry van der Zee travelled to Africa to evaluate this treatment for himself and concluded that the results were impressive. He observed that in just a few days or weeks patients become symptom free and able to return to their jobs and schools or to look after their children again. Harry believes that using the PC1 remedy, the AIDS-epidemic can be called to a halt, and that homeopaths are the ones that can do it.

In 2007, Harry joined with Peter Chappell and Corrie Hiwat to found the Amma Resonance Healing Foundation to promote the development of healing through resonance. Treating AIDS in Africa is at present its main target, but since the potential is there the ARHF will also focus on the treatment of other epidemic, infectious and chronic diseases.

Harry van der Zee is a homeopathic doctor who has practised in the Netherlands for twenty years. He has taught at different schools in the Netherlands and in many European countries as well as the USA and Japan. He is well known in the UK as the editor of Homoeopathic Links. He has investigated the importance of the birth experience in homeopathic case-taking and published two books on the subject. Most recently Harry has been involved in projects in Africa to enhance the homeopathic treatment of AIDS and has edited and published Peter Chappell's book 'The Second Simillimum'.

Hilary Fairclough:*The Maun Homeopathy Project, Botswana

Hilary Fairclough is joint founder and director of the Maun Homeopathy Project, a charity registered in the UK which runs outreach clinics in Maun, Botswana for people living with HIV and AIDS and/or traumatised by rape. The clinics have been run on a permanent basis since October 2005 by a rolling programme of volunteer homeopaths from the UK. The project works in partnership with local agencies and receives referrals from the Maun General Hospital, local health clinics and through word of mouth. The homeopaths treat 50-60 clients a week using a system of prescribing called the "triad method" which addresses the chronic, acute and miasmatic pathology of the cases. The results have been impressive and the project is now integrated into the fabric of healthcare and support services in this traumatised community where over 35% of the population are HIV+, one of the highest rates in the world. Botswana was the first country in Africa to provide free anti-retroviral drugs and the homeopaths work in a complementary way with this conventional medical approach to HIV and AIDS.

In her presentation Hilary will talk about the background to treating people with HIV and AIDS in Maun and will explain the "triad method" using cases to illustrate the approach.

Hilary trained in homeopathy at the London College of Classical Homeopathy qualifying in 1995. She worked as a nurse for ten years before training to be a homeopath. This experience included community nursing, palliative care and lecturing. Her experience as a homeopath includes setting up two NHS homeopathy clinics and facilitating on supervision courses run by The Society of Homeopaths. She practises in both London and Penzance.
